WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1858 [COMMUNICATED.

A DREAM OF THE DEPARTED, CHAS. STUART HALL. TO HIS WOTHER AND SISTERS.

The following is no fancy sketch, but a veritable dream of the night-a vision of that "sweet singer"--whose tones yet linger like the memory of other days-"pleasant yet mournful to the soul,"-one, who by his brilliant genius rose so beau ifully; dezzled sweetness, and then went out like a quenched star-to shine again, we humbly trust, in a purer heaven—that heaven where the little PUT UP IN BAGS, FURNISHED AND discordant notes of wayward life are lost and hushed in the grand harmony of eternal

Last night, when wrapt in slumber deep, There came a wild grand strain, As when the Ocean wakes from sleep, Then dies along the main; I never thought Twould be my lot
To hear him on this earth again! First, the sweet song of "Yesterday"

Died like departing light, Then "Shells of Ocean" swelled away, To hymn's sublimest height, At that still time When midnight's chime, So oft had stayed for his "Good night."

And he did look just as of yore! Brim ful of mirth and fun; The same dark locks on his fine brow, The same stamp thereupon; And in that eye That could not die,

A genius radiant as the Sun. Flash after flash! rebound on bound! Our mirth "played battle-door"-When suddenly he started round, And said with voice lower, "Does any one

When I am gone Know why it is I am no more?" "That fatal morning of my death, As I my limbs did lave, I heard a gentle Syren's breath, Up through the crystal wave, A cooing me And wooing me

To follow to her fairy cave. Resistless slave, at music's bid, She scarcely whispered "Come," E'er I was following as she led, Enchanted! spell-bound! dumb! Along! along! Through realms of song,

Until we came to Music's home. The door was shut, she bade me sing, And instantly 'twas riven, A moment more, and crown and wing With harp divine-were given: At the White Throne I laid them down,

And lo! I found I was in heaven! With ecstacy I poured my soul, Over that speaking lyre, The streams rushed wild without control, All heaven seemed on fire, I bowed my head,

And Jesus said "I sent for thee to join my Choir." Click went the door, and lo! there stood-Bending like any flower, Angel in beck'ning attitude,

Trembling in beauty's power-"Come, come," she said "Thy time is fled, Our music's hushed this half an hour." I grasped his hand with maniac word-

He said with air sublime, "The voice of my departed Lord Is in that midnight chime— Yes, I must go, Yet this much know, You'll hear from me one other time!"

Once more ! and that's when you are lying Some gentle summer even, When thou-like sun and breeze, art dying, And clock has just struck seven, Then look for me, I'll come to thee,

And sing thy soul away to heaven."
TARPLEY STARR. Clarke County, May 6th, 1858.

"DOUGLASS JEROLD'S WIT." ELEGANT PORTRAIT PAINTER .- They painted me with a military cloak slipping off my shoulders, my band, with ten rings upon it, supporting my bead, my forehead an enormous piece of white paint, and my eyes fixed upon a star, poetically placed in the corner of the picture within an inch of the frame .-I was seated on a rock, with a very handsome ink-stand beside me, and my right hand grasping, as if in a spasm of inspiration, an eagle's feather! Altogether I made a very prety show.

ACCOMMODATION BILLS .- There is one objection to a bill, it puts another pair of wings to the back of time. Dogmatism is puppyism come to its full

AN EXEMPLARY SCHOOLMASTER --- It was his prejudice to prefer one slip of olive to a whole grove of birch. COMMENTATORS .- Worthy folks who too often write on books, as men with diamonds write on glass, obscuring light with scratches. GAMBLING. I never by chance hear the rattling of dice that it doesn't sound to me like the funeral bell of a whole family.
